RETRIEVER REVIEW

AUGUST/SEPTEMBER 2011

WWW.LRCSOCAL.ORG

PRESIDENTS MESSAGE

Hi Guys!

I am afraid to say anything about the wonderful weather we have had up to now, as I don't want to jinx it! I hope everyone has used the cooler temps to be out and about with your Labs.

October will be a busy month for LRCSC. Be sure to save Saturday Oct. 8th for the LRCSC BOB Match. (see flyer in this issue) CGC will be offered and a great pot luck lunch with Sandwiches Club provided. Bring your favorite item and have a fun day with the dogs at Tewinkle Park in Costa Mesa.

Plans are in the works for a September or October Working Certificate Practice Day. When the date is confirmed, a blast will be sent to everyone.

The Fall Hunt Tests are set for Oct. 29 and 30th with the Working Certificate on Sun.

Don't forget that Top Dog Competition is right around the corner in November. If you have a good working dog and would like to be considered for the Top Dog team, contact Wendy Pennington (sealionlabs@aol.com)

Lots to do and a chance for everyone to get started in an activity with your Labrador. What could be greater! We are so lucky to be in a breed that has such versatility.

Hope to see you and your dogs!

Margaret

Ric Fox with Maya and Cooper

It is with a very heavy heart that we share the sad news that we have lost a member of our Labrador community.

Ric Fox passed away June 29th while hiking near Hetch Hetchy Reservoir with friends.

Among the many hobbies that Ric enjoyed, such as photography and hiking/backpacking, he loved to cook and was recently featured in an article on the "Retriever Life" website, where he shared his recipe for Pawsta Carbonara. Here is a link to that article, <http://retrieverlife.com/magazine/2011/06/pasta-carbonara-recipe/>. Always eager to help out at our Club's events, Ric always had a big smile while he was working. He truly was one of the good guys!

Ric loved to show his boy, "Cooper" in the conformation ring, and was in the ring earlier this year with his new favorite girl, "Maya", the pup that he and Irma got from Christine Tye at Gingerbred Labradors last year.

Ric is survived by his wife, Irma, who is on the Board of LRCSC, their 3 sons, Christopher, Jeremy, and Jordan, and grandchildren, Brendan and Alexis. Ric and Irma celebrated their 28th wedding anniversary on June 25th.

A memorial service was held on Saturday, July 9th, at 11:00am at Whittier Church of Christ, and the church was filled to standing room only by the people whose lives were touched by this generous man.

Godspeed dear friend!

Ric and Cooper

My Dear Labrador Friends,

Words cannot express how much your love and support has meant to me. Your generosity has touched me. "THANK YOU", for your words of encouragement, cards and gifts.

I was extremely excited when Ric began training for the Hunt Test &, Obedience with Cooper, and actually enjoying handling in the ring. He once said, "I drank the Kool-Aid". He loved participating in club activities, but most of all, "each" one of you. I will miss him.

I know that I will continue in due time, but since it is the most recent memories, I am taking some time off. Cooper and Maya bring so much joy in our home.

Please keep me and my boys in your prayers.

With Love,
Irma

Story by Full Member Joanie Shugar

I am very excited for Goldie. Stonecreek's

Natv Gold Dust, "Goldie" qualified at the Chanel City Kennel Club at the Summer Fest Dog Show July 8th. Goldie got her first CD leg in Novice B and Third Place with a score of 179. I am so excited. We didn't qualify the following day and would have at the Ventura Dog Fanciers, but I double handled. Did a verbal and hand signal at the same time. Oh, my! Goldie is thinking I am the one that needs to go to class.

Goldie also received a new title that the AKC is offering now for therapy dogs. After filling out the application which you can get on line and have 50 documented visits, send in a 20.00 fee. Goldie now has her "AKC Therapy Dog" title. She received a beautiful patch and certificate. Anyone who is in Therapy Dogs International, Love on a Leash, Delta, Therapy Dogs Inc., can apply. This is important to put in the newsletter as I know of a lot of Therapy Dogs in the club. Finally the AKC is recognizing this as a title for all the hard work dogs volunteering in pet therapy. I am enclosing a photo of Goldie and her ribbons.

Hope all is well.

FUN STUFF

The Year 2011, is the year of Feng Shui and Luck, which I wish for you all.

The month of July this year has 5 Fridays, 5 Saturdays and 5 Sundays. This combination arrives only once every 623 years. The Chinese call this phenomenon "The Sacs of money".

This year is the Year of Money and Wealth. The month of October will have 5 Saturdays, 5 Sundays and 5 Mondays! This combination arrives only once every 823 years! These years are called the years of Gain.

This year is a bit special. We will have 4 unusual dates:

1/1/11, 11/1/11, 1/11/11, 11/11/11

....and that is not all.

Take the last two digits of the year of your birth and the age you will have or have this year, add them, and the sum for everyone is 111 !

Ex: 63 + 48 = 111

What are you doing to beat the heat?!

CPR in Dogs

http://www.superhappypets.com/article_dog_cpr.html

Despite your best efforts to keep your dog safe, the unthinkable can happen. Your dog could choke on a toy, chew through an electric cord, slip out the door and get hit by a car, or collapse from heatstroke on a hot day. Any number of serious illnesses or injuries could lead to respiratory arrest (failure to breathe) and then rapidly spiral into cardiac arrest (stopped heart) and ultimately death. If your dog fell unconscious and stopped breathing, would you know what to do?

CPR, or Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation, is an emergency procedure used to restore life to an animal (or human) whose breathing or heartbeat has stopped. The goal of CPR is to keep oxygen flowing to the brain and other vital organs until more definitive treatment can be obtained. CPR does not take the place of proper veterinary care. But when conducted appropriately, it can make all the difference for your dog.

The ABC's of CPR

It is important to confirm that your dog is unconscious and has actually stopped breathing or has no pulse before you attempt to perform CPR. Take a moment to observe the situation before forging ahead. Does your dog fail to respond when you try to rouse her? Is her chest no longer rising and falling as with normal breathing movements? Is there anything stuck in her mouth, any blood or other sign of injury? Are you unable to feel a pulse? If your pet's breathing or heartbeat has truly stopped, her tongue, lips and gums will soon start to turn blue. If you see these signs, it's time to act.

CPR in animals and humans has three main components: Airway, Breathing and Circulation, and they must be addressed in that order. There's no sense trying to restore a pulse (circulation) in an unconscious dog before first trying to remove the toy that is lodged in her throat (airway).

A=Airway

If your dog is unconscious and has stopped breathing, first make sure there is nothing blocking her windpipe. In cases where a dog is choking, this may resolve the problem.

What to do:

1. Lie your dog on her side
2. Gently extend the neck and incline the head upwards slightly
3. Look in the mouth for any blood, vomitus, or foreign material and clear it away if possible.
4. Pull the tongue forward. Sometimes this will dislodge an object.
5. Perform a "finger sweep" of the back of the throat to dislodge objects forward onto the back of the tongue.
6. If all else fails, try the doggy Heimlich maneuver described in our article on Canine First Aid.
7. Tweezers or pliers may be used to dislodge a solid foreign body
8. Check to see if your dog begins breathing again. If she is breathing effectively, her tongue and lips will start to turn pink and she will slowly come to. If not, proceed to then next step (rescue breathing).

9. Seek veterinary care immediately, regardless of whether your dog seems to have revived completely. Unforeseen complications can arise minutes to hours after an episode of choking or respiratory arrest.

What not to do:

1. Take extreme caution not to get bitten. This procedure must only be performed on an unconscious animal.
2. Don't confuse the tiny bones in the back of the throat (the larynx) with a foreign body!

B=Breathing

If the airway is clear but your dog is still unconscious and not breathing, it's time to perform rescue breathing. The goal of rescue breathing is to provide oxygen to the lungs and vital organs until spontaneous breathing can resume. It is analogous to "mouth-to-mouth" resuscitation in people. The procedure is modified for small or large dogs to account for their different anatomy.

What to do for a large or medium-sized dog:

1. Gently tilt the head upward to straighten the airway.
2. Grasp the tongue and pull it forward
3. Close the dog's mouth and clasp the muzzle shut with both hands to minimize air leaks.
4. Clamp your lips over the dog's nose and exhale with enough force to expand your dog's chest as it would with a normal breath. Inhalation should take about one second.
5. Relax and let your dog's lungs deflate normally.
6. Give 3 to 5 rescue breaths and then pause to see if your dog is breathing on her own.
7. If she has not resumed breathing, continue rescue breathing, aiming for 8-10 breaths per minute.
8. Occasionally pause to press down on your dog's abdomen. This will release air that may have built up in the stomach.
9. Seek veterinary care immediately, even if your dog resumes breathing normally. Your vet will need to observe for complications and determine why breathing stopped in the first place.

What to do for a small dog:

1. Gently tilt the head upward to straighten the airway.
2. Cover your dog's entire nose and the front of her mouth with your lips.
3. Clamp the corners of her mouth shut with your hands to prevent leaks and proceed as with rescue breathing for larger dogs, above.

What not to do:

1. Rescue breathing is for animals who are unconscious. Never attempt rescue breathing on an awake or distressed animal.
2. Don't attempt rescue breathing unless you have confirmed that the airway is clear.

Is your dog breathing?

This can be tricky to determine in an unconscious dog, but it is critical information. Stay calm if you can and take a moment to assess the following:

- Can you see the normal rise and fall of the chest?
- Can you feel exhaled breath on your hand?
- Gently pluck a tuft of hair from your dog's coat and hold it near the mouth and nose. Is it stirring back and forth with your dog's breath?
- Check the gums. Have they turned blue? If yes, your dog has probably stopped breathing.

C=Circulation

Clearing the airway and performing rescue breaths may be all that's needed to revive your dog in an emergency. But if you've completed these steps and your dog is still not breathing AND has no heartbeat—or if your dog had no pulse even from the start—it will be necessary to provide chest compressions along with rescue breathing. To put things in perspective, the prognosis for a dog who has suffered both cardiac and pulmonary arrest is not favorable. The overall survival rate may be less than 5% for animals who have arrested, and of course this depends on the severity of the reason that the heart and breathing stopped in the first place. But in this rare type of emergency, you may be your dog's best and only chance.

Performing chest compressions

The principle here is the same as in human CPR courses many of us have taken along the way. Direct compression of the chest wall overlaying the heart can actually force it to passively pump blood. This is sometimes enough to sustain life until the heart can be restarted.

What to do for medium and large dogs:

1. Lie your dog on her side
2. Extend your elbows and cup one hand over the other. Place your hands on your dog's chest in the area right behind the tip of the elbow.
3. Briskly compress the chest by 2-3 inches at a rate of 80 to 100 beats per minute.

What to do for small dogs:

1. Cup your palm or fingertips around the area of the chest right behind the elbows
2. Briskly compress the chest by 1/2 to 1 inch at a rate of 100-120 beats per minute.

Continue doing this until you feel a pulse or arrive at the veterinary hospital. Be aware that an animal who has no pulse and is not breathing despite 20 minutes of CPR is extremely unlikely to survive.

How to coordinate chest compressions with rescue breathing:

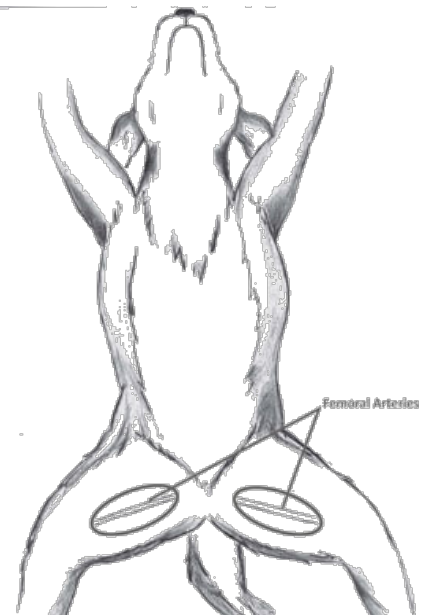

It's best if there are two people to perform CPR. One person can give chest compressions while the other gives rescue breaths. If no one else is available to help, then you must alternate between the two. In this case, give one rescue breath for every 12 chest compressions.

Every savvy dog lover should know the ABC's of CPR. Hopefully you'll never need to use them.

How to check your dog's pulse

Checking your dog's pulse can be a bit tricky even under normal circumstances. Practicing this at home when you're both relaxed and comfortable will help you be prepared in an emergency. Note that a dog's pulse rate is typically faster than that of a human and depends on size. A large dog may have a pulse rate of 70-90 beats per minute whereas a small dog's heart may beat up to 120 times per minute.

The best place to feel your dog's pulse is the femoral artery, which runs down the inside of the thigh from the groin to the knee. Cup your right hand firmly over the front of your dog's right upper thigh (or use your left hand on her left thigh) with your fingertips touching the groin area. Move your fingertips back and forth until you feel your dog's pulse.

Are Dogs Color Blind

<http://www.doghealth.com/vision/are-dogs-color-blind>

Many people think that their pet dog lives in an old black and white movie, unable to distinguish colors, and it seems that it is a ho-hum world indeed. Poor Fido can't even enjoy that handsome winter sweater we so carefully picked out for his days at the dog park. And what about that fancy blue ball he loves to fetch? Is it merely a dim grey orb lolling in bleak grey grass? Well, not quite.

Until rather recently, the 1990's in fact, it was thought that dogs could not see color at all. After advanced research, science has come to find that your dog's retinas actually do contain the color-sensitive components called cones.

Dogs have fewer cones than we do in our retinas so they don't see quite as many colors as a human, and the colors they see are not as robust and vibrant, but they do see color.

The following graph (courtesy of Dr. Mark Plonsky PHD, University of Wisconsin, Stevens Point) is a wonderful and easy to read example of how your dog's vision compares to our human vision.

In looking at the chart we can see that certain colors are indistinguishable to them. Red looks brownish-grey or brownish-black, and orange, green and yellow all look yellow.

Your dog is able to see the color blue. Purple seems blue to them. Greenish blue and green seem grey.

More Interesting Information About Dog Vision

Another component of a retina is called a rod. Dogs have more rod cells than we do. Rod cells help see in dim light and also to distinguish the color gray.

It is believed that dogs can not only comprehend grey well, but that they can see many shades of grey that we cannot. Dogs, like cats, also see much better than we do in dim light situations.

Dogs are nearsighted creatures and do not see clearly at distances of more than 20 feet. They are able to detect movement at great distances, but cannot see the detail that would allow them to distinguish you from a small tree.
