

RETRIEVER REVIEW

JUNE 2010

WWW.LRCSOCAL.ORG

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Hi Everybody,

What a great Specialty! The weather was fantastic, the judges were wonderful and everyone had a great time, judging by the compliments that keep coming in. The single ring was very popular with exhibitors and spectators, and the judges loved being able to judge all of the dogs on the day. We plan to keep the same format for next year. Now if we could just get those results....

The week-long Labrador Retriever Club National that the three Southern California regional clubs will host this October at Prado Regional Park, is not that far off. Raffles, banquets, Agility, Tracking, Obedience, two Conformation Specialty shows, a Hunt Test and Working Certificate are among the many events and activities. Watch the Review for further details and schedules. LRCSC plans to hold some conformation and obedience practice events later in August and September, including training days to prepare for the Working Certificate that will be held at the National.

If we can pull it together we will hold a get-together day in mid-July. Tentative plans are for separate conformation and obedience practice rings, both with instruction/tips for beginners, followed by lunch with a speaker/demonstration of bomb detecting Labradors from the Orange County bomb squad. If time allows we will have a general meeting with informal discussion. Plan to join us!

Does Diet Affect Field Trial Performance

MARTIN COFFMAN DVM
ERIC ALTOM PHD

For decades, professional and amateur retriever trainers have depended on optimal nutrition to complete the triad of genetics and training for success in retriever field trials. Common sense has dictated the value of good nutrition in support of canine athletes and has become one of the standard tools we all use in conditioning the all-age competitor. Modern training of the field trial retriever has evolved to allow true Olympic-class athleticism in the successful dog. This attainment of performance, coupled with the increased number of competitive animals, has caused trainers and owners to look at every nuance of conditioning to maximize execution in these dogs. Nutrition is one example of these fine points.

But, the question has always lingered: Does diet really affect a dog's performance in the field? New research may give us insight into the positive role of diet in the field trial retriever.¹ While the research was conducted using upland pointing dogs, the connection with field trial retrievers can be made. Both activities require stamina, cognitive function, and use of the same senses.

In this field study, 23 trained English Pointers were randomly assigned to be fed either of two commercial dog foods. The dogs were selected "blindly" (i.e. the assignment to the food was done without knowledge of the dog's quality as a bird dog.) Over an entire season (November through February), data were collected on the dogs to determine the effects, if any, that high-quality nutrition had on hunting performance.

The two diets were a well-known "performance" food A and a widely accepted product used for sporting dogs. The foods arrived at the plantation in plain brown bags marked only with a blue sticker or a yellow sticker and the handlers of the dogs were unaware of the identity of the diets.

The dogs were subjected to a normal hunting routine as used on this plantation. Each dog was trained and conditioned for 2 months prior to opening day which, in Georgia, occurs in mid-November. During each half-day bird hunt, a total of 8 dogs were typically used (4 braces) and the selection of the dogs and their hunting time was at the discretion of the handlers. The handlers kept records of total time hunted, number of finds, number of flushes, general attitude of the dog, and reason for stopping the hunt and/or changing dogs (fatigue, lack of interest, or injury).

During the study, all dogs remained healthy and consumed typical amounts of food throughout the entire season. No differences in the amount of food consumed were observed.

The differences in hunting performance were remarkable. Dogs fed the performance diet did maintain their body weight and overall condition better than the dogs on the standard diet.

Dogs fed the performance food also demonstrated superior hunting ability, compared with the dogs fed the maintenance food. Dogs fed the performance food found an average of 7.5 coveys/singles per hunt, compared with 4.5 coveys/singles per hunt for the dogs on the standard dog food. Data for finds/hour documented that the performance diet again resulted in better hunting success. Finds/hour with the performance food was 2.49 on average, versus 1.55 for the dogs on the maintenance food.

In addition, this study documented that dogs fed the higher fat levels performed better even on hot and humid days! Quail season in south Georgia can be warm and, during this study, 9 days had high or severe heat stress. Regardless, the dogs fed the high-fat performance food still out-performed the dogs on the standard dog food, documenting the value of fat as the primary energy source for performance dogs, regardless of adverse weather conditions.

Performance foods are typically high in fat, which provides more energy for Pointers and other athletic dogs. A good performance food should have 20% fat as part of the nutritional composition. Fat has 2.5 times the calories of carbohydrate (grain), so a high-fat diet can offer more energy in a smaller amount of food.

As shown in this study, improved nutrition can actually result in better hunting performance. This could be due to higher-quality ingredients, the higher fat level, improved digestibility, or other nutritional factors. Regardless, we all know that if a dog swings around a grain field and makes a 100-yard cast, it will find x amount of birds. If the dog makes a 150-yard

PERMISSION GRANTED TO POST AND CROSS-POST

CALIFORNIA--Medical Exemption Bill AB 2000 ACTION ALERT!

On 12/21/09 California State Public Health Veterinarian, Dr. Ben Sun (916) 552-9744, designated ALL COUNTIES in California as "rabies areas" for 2010

http://www.cdph.ca.gov/HealthInfo/discond/Documents/2010_LHD_Rabies_Declaration_Letter.pdf

The declaration states: "The Director of the Department of Public Health has declared all counties in California as 'rabies areas' in 2010. This declaration is based on the ongoing cyclic nature of rabies in California wildlife, and the resulting threat of exposure to domestic animals, livestock, and humans."

An April 5, 2010 amendment to AB2000 http://www.leginfo.ca.gov/pub/09-10/bill/asm/ab_1951-2000/ab_2000_bill_20100405_amended_asm_v98.html which seeks to add a medical exemption clause for sick dogs in designated "rabies areas," would included the following language: "(2) A dog exempt from the canine antirabies vaccination shall be kept quarantined as directed by the local health officer, until the dog's medical condition has resolved and the administration of the canine antirabies vaccine occurs."

This bill is currently in the Senate Rules Committee for consideration.

Under current law, the Department of Public Health is authorized to require annual rabies vaccinations in designated "rabies areas," which includes ALL counties in California for 2010. With the passage of AB2000 as amended on April 5th, dogs with medical exemptions would be required to be quarantined, which could be in an off-site pound or facility as determined by the local health officer, until their medical condition resolves or they are given a rabies vaccine.

At the bottom of this action alert is a copy of the letter I sent on behalf of The Rabies Challenge Fund on this issue.

What You Can Do to Help

Call the Senate Rules Committee and call or send an e-mail to all its members telling them to withdraw Paragraph (2) of the amendment pertaining to quarantining medically exemption animals and strike language in Section 121690 (b) of the law authorizing the Health Department to impose annual or biennial rabies vaccinations in "rabies areas."

cast, it will find x+y number of birds. Stamina and energy become the key factors. In this study, higher-quality nutrition resulted in finding more birds, an accomplishment we all appreciate regardless of breed or sport.

So, how does this research pertain to the field trial retriever? Optimal nutrition has common consequences in all canine athletes. From sled dogs to racing Greyhounds to field trial retrievers, dogs can benefit from nutritional research. One example is research on the value of protein². Dogs in intense training were fed foods with protein levels varying from 16% to 40%. Dogs fed the lower-protein foods (16% and 24%) had injuries during training and all of the dogs on the 16%-protein food were removed from training due to injuries. Dogs fed 32% and 40% protein had no injuries during the training process. An important goal of canine nutritionists is to provide the performance dog with a food that supplies sufficient calories from other sources to allow minimal protein usage for caloric needs. This spares the protein for tissue repair, hormone production, and the other crucial functions of protein.

The best source of these calories is fat. Either carbohydrates or fat usually provides most of the energy in dog food. It has been known for many years that high-carbohydrate foods can cause stiff gait in endurance dogs.³ Further research documented the value of fat as an energy source.² The VO₂ Max* of highly conditioned dogs was recorded. Subsequently, the VO₂ Max of ordinary dogs on low-fat diets was compared to their VO₂ Max on high-fat diets. The levels of VO₂ Max for the ordinary dogs placed on a high-fat diet equaled that of the highly conditioned dogs. These findings suggest that diet may play a critical role in endurance, and specifically that feeding high levels of dietary fat may increase VO₂ Max and the maximal rate of fat use for energy. For the field trial retriever and other field dogs, this could result in better endurance and greater performance in competitive events.

Not only does the level of fat effect performance, but the source of the fat is also important. Fat is composed of different types of fatty acids which are characterized by their chemical structure. Terms like omega-6 and omega-3 are used by chemists and nutritionists to identify two important types of fatty acids. During inflammatory processes, these fatty acids produce "eicosanoids" [eye-ko-san-oid]. The eicosanoids from omega-6 and omega-3 fatty acids result in markedly different levels of inflammatory response in body tissues. For example, the eicosanoids produced from omega-6 fatty acids can be more inflammatory and immunosuppressive than those produced by omega-3 fatty acids. Research conducted by Iams Company scientists has documented the value of a specific range of ratios of these fatty acids in the diet.⁴ For optimal conditions, a ratio of between 5:1 and 10:1 (omega-6 to omega-3 fatty acids) is recommended.

Field trial retrievers represent one of the most competitive and highly conditioned groups of dogs known. Modern training methods have allowed dogs to continue impressive feats during field trials and to persist in pushing the performance envelope. The dogs running today are not the same as those who ran in the fifties and sixties. Modern all-age field trials allow dogs to perform retrieves only dreamed of twenty years ago. The nutritional needs of these dogs have likewise escalated and owners, breeders, and trainers can utilize modern, researched diets to enhance their charges' performance in field trials.

Letter from The Rabies Challenge Fund

May 15, 2010

Senator Darrell Steinberg, Chair
Senate Rules Committee
State Capitol, Room 205
Sacramento, CA 94248-0001

RE: Amended Rabies Bill AB2000

Greetings Senator Steinberg:

The Rabies Challenge Fund Charitable Trust respectfully requests that the Senate Rules Committee withdraw Paragraph (2) of the April 5th amendment to AB2000 which mandates that “A dog exempt from the canine antirabies vaccination shall be kept quarantined, as directed by the local health officer, until the dog's medical condition has resolved and the administration of the canine antirabies vaccine occurs.” This amendment seeks to address a public health threat which does not exist in the canine community, and which will, if passed, pose a life-threatening risk to dogs whose health is already compromised.

California's Department of Public Health (CDPH) statistics clearly demonstrate that bats and other wildlife pose the greatest rabies threat to the public, not dogs. From 2001 through 2008, the CDPH reported 2 cases of human rabies contracted in the state, both of which were transmitted by bats. Further, according to data contained in the annual Reported Animal Rabies by County and Species issued by the CDPH, from the period of 2001 through May 7, 2010, (throughout which time all counties had been designated “rabies areas”), dogs were among the species with the least number of rabies cases in California. During the cited surveillance period 1,440 bats, 462 skunks, 74 foxes, 11 cats, and 5 dogs were reported as rabid.

The Center for Disease Control documented 32 cases of domestically-contracted cases of human rabies in the U.S. from 1995 through 2008 – 30 illnesses were transmitted by bats, 1 by fox, and 1 by raccoon. Since 1995, there have been no reported cases of human rabies from exposure to an indigenous dog in this country, and no demonstrated need exists for the California Legislature to pass harsh rabies regulations targeting dogs.

Further, The Rabies Challenge Fund asks that the Committee strike the following bolded, underlined language in the current law under Section 121690 (b) which is reiterated in AB2000 as follows: “(b) Every dog owner, after his or her dog attains the age of four months, shall, at intervals of time not more often than once a year, as may be prescribed by the department, procure its vaccination by a licensed veterinarian with a canine antirabies vaccine approved by, and in a manner prescribed by, the department, unless a licensed veterinarian determines, on an annual basis, that the dog may have a potentially lethal reaction to the canine antirabies vaccine. is currently immune compromised or has a documented medical record of a preexisting condition, including, but not limited to, an immune mediated disease, or a serious adverse reaction to a prior canine antirabies vaccine.”

Mandating rabies vaccinations more often than once every 3 years, even in designated “rabies areas,” goes against the recommendations of all the national veterinary medical associations, including the American Veterinary Medical Association [1] and the Center for Disease Control's National Association of State Public Health Veterinarian's Compendium of Animal Rabies Prevention and Control 2008 which states that, “Vaccines used in state and local rabies control programs should have at least a 3-year duration of immunity. This constitutes the most effective method of increasing the proportion of immunized dogs and cats in any population.”

Section 121690 (b) of the Health and Safety Code may violate California's Consumer Protection Law by requiring pet owners to pay for a veterinary medical procedure from which their animals derive no benefit and may be harmed. The section of the law requiring biennial or annual rabies boosters in “rabies areas” may have been intended to achieve enhanced immunity to the rabies virus by giving the vaccine more often than the federal 3-year licensing standard, but, more frequent vaccination than is required to fully immunize an animal will not achieve further disease protection.

Redundant rabies shots needlessly expose dogs to the risk of adverse effects while obligating residents to pay unnecessary veterinary medical fees. The American Veterinary Medical Association's 2001 Principles of Vaccination state that "Unnecessary stimulation of the immune system does not result in enhanced disease resistance, and may increase the risk of adverse post-vaccination events."

The 3 year rabies vaccines currently licensed by the USDA for dogs all have a minimum duration of immunity of 3 years proven by challenge studies (the definitive standard in vaccine research) conducted according to the licensing standards set forth in USDA Title 9 Part 113.209. Serological studies performed by Dr. Ronald Schultz of the University of Wisconsin School of Veterinary Medicine show a minimum duration of immunity of 7 years. According to the Center for Disease Control, "A fully vaccinated dog or cat is unlikely to become infected with rabies.... In a nationwide study of rabies among dogs and cats in 1988,...no documented vaccine failures occurred among dogs or cats that had received two vaccinations." [2]

Immunologically, the rabies vaccine is the most potent of the veterinary vaccines and associated with significant adverse reactions such as polyneuropathy "resulting in muscular atrophy, inhibition or interruption of neuronal control of tissue and organ function, incoordination, and weakness,"[3] auto-immune hemolytic anemia,[4] autoimmune diseases affecting the thyroid, joints, blood, eyes, skin, kidney, liver, bowel and central nervous system; anaphylactic shock; aggression; seizures; epilepsy; and fibrosarcomas at injection sites are all linked to the rabies vaccine.[5] [6] It is medically unsound for this vaccine to be given more often than is necessary to maintain immunity.

A "killed" vaccine, the rabies vaccine contains adjuvants to enhance the immunological response. In 1999, the World Health Organization "classified veterinary vaccine adjuvants as Class III/IV carcinogens with Class IV being the highest risk,"[7] and the results of a study published in the August 2003 Journal of Veterinary Medicine documenting fibrosarcomas at the presumed injection sites of rabies vaccines stated, "In both dogs and cats, the development of necrotizing panniculitis at sites of rabies vaccine administration was first observed by Hendrick & Dunagan (1992)." [8] According to the 2003 AAHA Guidelines, "...killed vaccines are much more likely to cause hypersensitivity reactions (e.g., immune-mediated disease)." [9]

On behalf of The Rabies Challenge Fund Charitable Trust and the many concerned California pet owners who have requested our assistance, I strongly urge you to withdraw Paragraph (2) of the April 5th amendment to AB2000 and strike the language in the current law cited in the bill authorizing the CDPH to impose annual or biennial rabies boosters in "rabies areas."

Sincerely,

Canine DNA Test Update

From DDC Veterinary

For all dogs tested between now until June 15 we are offering a very special promotion on all of our inherited disease and trait DNA tests.

Here's how it works:

Same low price of $58 for the first DNA test, then $20 for each subsequent DNA test ordered for the same dog. This special pricing can be applied to all of our DNA testing options found within these links...

<http://www.vetdnacenter.com/canine-disease-test.html>

<http://www.vetdnacenter.com/canine-traits-test.html>

For example: Rover needs tested for EIC = $58.

Get Rover tested for CNM for only $20.

See if he carries chocolate (Coat Color-B locus) for another $20

And if he carries yellow (Coat Color-E locus) for $20 more!

Send in 5 or more dogs for testing & receive an additional $10 off of the base price!! The base price is $48 per dog for the 1st inherited traits or disease test.

Add a 2nd test for the same dog for only $20 ($68 total).

Add a 3rd test (same dog) for another $20 ($88 total). And so on.

Send 5 dogs for Degenerative Myelopathy (5 X $48 = $240) & add Coat Length testing for all 5 dogs for $20 more per dog = $340. That's $140 off of our regular discounted price!

All samples must be received at DDC Veterinary by June 15, 2010.

It has always been our mission to provide our clients with the very best value:

- The lowest price
- Fastest turnaround on results (normally just a few days and no longer than 10 days guaranteed)
- Guaranteed 100% accuracy
- Free sample collection kits
- DNA tests with the convenience of a cheek swab (equally accurate as blood)
- Pups can be DNA tested at ANY age.

Call or email to take advantage of this great offer!

Please feel free to cross post and share this news with all of your friends, and thanks again for choosing DDC.

Best wishes,

Randall Smith
